Thin Calcium Phosphate Coatings for Medical Implants

Thin calcium phosphate coatings of about 10 µm or less can improve the bone response in orthopedic and dental implants by overcoming the drawbacks of commercially successful, thick plasma-sprayed hydroxyapatite (HA) coatings. These alternative coatings have shown better adhesion to a variety of substrates and, because of their uniformity in structure and composition, greater stability in the biological environment. Thin Calcium Phosphate Coatings for Medical Implants presents a comprehensive, state-of-the-art review of the preparation, physico-chemical properties, and in vitro and in vivo performance of these bioactive coatings, including comparisons with thick plasma-sprayed HA techniques. Emphasis is also placed on the benefits of special characterization techniques for this type of thin coating. This book is an essential resource not only for biomaterials researchers and their students, but also for engineers in the design, development, and manufacture of medical implants.... more on <http://springer.com/978-0-387-77718-4>

ISBN 978-0-387-77718-4

- ▶ First comprehensive review of the results achieved with thin calcium phosphate coatings on orthopedic and dental implants
- ▶ Compares thin calcium phosphate coatings with thick coatings produced by current plasma-spraying techniques
- ▶ Presents the state-of-the-art in the study of bioactive calcium phosphate coatings
- ▶ Reviews novel methods of coating formation, physico-chemical properties, performance, and characterization techniques
